A Little Hallowe'en History

The celebration of All Hallows' Eve has ancient Celtic origins. What we know as Halloween today is a colorful union of customs that evolved from a pagan festival that celebrated the end of the summer and the harvest season. When the Christian church began to expand its influences, the focus of the old pagan rituals was reassociated with All Saints' or Hallows' Day. The night before this feast became known as All Hallows' Even, abbreviated as Hallowe'en. This spelling remained in place until well into the 1930s.

Hallowe'en has not always been the night of ghoulish and garish decorations, candy and trick-or-treating we know today. Using much of the now forgotten folklore brought to this country by Irish, Scottish and English immigrants, Hallowe'en celebrations in the early 1900s were occasions for young adults to gather and peer into the future for love and marriage, fate and fortune. This holiday was an opportunity to host a "frolic" with a romantic theme.

The fall fruit, the corn stalks, the witches, ghosts and goblins, the wearing of costumes and even the carved pumpkin jack-o'-lanterns we still decorate with today all have symbolism that connects to the ancient Celtic customs.

The Legend of Greenfield Village®

Start Here
Close your eyes and hold your breath and pass right through the gates. A village filled with spooky thrills ahead of you awaits!

The Legend of Sleepy Hollow
Your evening ends where legend starts as you stroll through Sleepy Hollow. Be careful now and watch your back for the horseman tends to follow!

When you behold the pumpkin tree, prepare to laugh with mirth and glee. Entwined in twigs grown long ago, flick'ring faces beckon and glow.

Mulberry, mulberry, dickory dock. Journey through trees all gnarled and dark. Hurry with caution, ticktock, ticktock. Take heed and beware the sounds in the bark!

Hansel & Gretel
The Tell-Tale Heart

All who know the tales of Poe do not from here depart. Veins will chill as cries the foe; he still his beating heart!

Halt! The monster's loose. He walks the woods and hides deep in the dark while mad inventor and angry mob search all through Menlo Park.

Spirits tonight haunt the graveyard. Beware the mist; be on your guard! Fear the ghosts and other horrors; the next new tombstone might be yours!

Children speak of pirate gold, and healthy maids will swoon while talking to the pirates here who row on our lagoon.

Separated in childhood! Fairy sisters; one bad, one good. Kynda and Roodelle meet again and bicker in the kingdom's glen.

Glowing are the dancing bones, emerged now from their vaults. Prance they as the music moans, time for the ske'l'tal waltz.

The covered bridge engulfed in fog and through it you must pass. "Be alert, fear not the bog," we warn each lad and lass.
