Staci Warrington

March 2, 1991 – Present

Nationality: American

Raced: 2003 – Present

Background: Staci Warrington was born in March of 1991 and was raised in Milton, Delaware. She began her racing career in 2003 when she started driving go-karts, and she soon found herself successfully competing on tracks around her hometown. Warrington raced in the Stock Heavy class and later switched to the Outlaw Karting Series. She had three wins, coming in first place in all of the races she participated in at the US 13 Kart Club Track in Delaware. In 2007, she spent her season driving in the Crate Late Model Division. Although she never won with the Crate Late Models, Warrington was competitive and raced well. Eager for more power, she moved up to the Super Late Model Division, where she raced during the 2008 and 2009 seasons. She spent her weekdays focusing on her academics and dedicated every Saturday night to competitions in the DTR Super Late Model class. Warrington made history on June 7, 2008 by becoming the first female to ever win in the Super Late Model Division at Delaware International Speedway. She graduated from Cape Henlopen High School on June 2, 2009 and on June 8th she was recognized by Lyn St. James' Women in the Winner's Circle Foundation, becoming one of six females that year to receive funding from the grant program Project Podium. Warrington is currently a freshman at Salisbury University, with a major in Environmental Issues and a minor in Biology. She enjoys competing on dirt tracks and will continue racing in the Super Late Model Division for the 2010 season.

Early Influences: Warrington first became involved with motor sports because of her father. He purchased a go-kart for her when she was younger and when she showed little interest in it, he considered selling the kart. Warrington eventually decided to try driving it and although her first experience resulted in a broken go-kart body, she ended up developing an interest in racing. Her dad stood beside her and helped as she began to race more frequently. She considers him to be her chief inspiration. She also lists her mom and her mentor, Lou Johnson, as significant influences in her life.
